To support the approval of branded medicines the FDA requires efficacy and safety data from in human, well-controlled clinical trials. They do this in part by creating lists of drugs that will or won't be paid for and then use their scale to negotiate lower costs. Either way, the pharmacy owners can barely say a word about their relationships with PBMs because of restrictions in their pharmacy provider agreements. Other clients are just flat out suing. Interestingly enough, these are also the fastest growing part of Rx drug plans. He along with Rep. The reason pharmacists have an ax to grind with PBMs is that they feel the PBMs are squeezing profits out of every part of the industry the insurers, the drugmakers, and the pharmacists while providing little value. Unexpectedly, because most of the time patients don't know how much drugs cost insurers, they just know what they have to pay as a co-pay. They're facing a backlash from America's largest employers, a group of which is working on a way to rewire the system. In the case of acid reflux, the drug in question is Nexium, and it serves as an illustration of the pharmacists' chief complaint.
